Dear Prashant,

This is with reference to the recent call audit conducted for a customer interaction regarding a fluctuation issue complaint.

As per the review, while the opening and closing were delivered as per the prescribed script and an apology was appropriately conveyed, the following concerns were observed during the call:

- The customer contacted regarding a fluctuation issue and informed that the complaint had already been registered twice but remained unresolved due to a loose connection from the pole and sparking.
- Although you verified the registered mobile number (9423464616) and consumer number (310210007112), and confirmed the customer details correctly, proper probing was not conducted to understand the urgency and severity of the issue.
- It was informed to the customer that both complaints were assigned and that feedback was added in both dispositions; however, upon verification, it was found that feedback was not updated in the system.
- Personalization was lacking during the interaction.
- There was noticeable dead air during the call.
- System documentation (feedback addition in both dispositions) was incorrectly communicated and not executed as stated.

Providing incorrect information and incomplete documentation is a serious concern, as it impacts customer trust and service resolution timelines. Additionally, effective probing and active engagement are essential components of quality customer handling.

You are hereby issued a First Warning for non-adherence to the call handling and documentation process. You are advised to strictly follow all process guidelines, ensure accurate system updates, avoid dead air, and maintain proper personalization and probing in every customer interaction.

Please treat this matter seriously and ensure immediate improvement. Any recurrence of similar discrepancies may lead to further disciplinary action.

We expect consistent adherence to quality and process standards going forward.

Regards!
